

A new residential tower, landmark in the City

(Montpellier, France)

L'Arbre Blanc, a new multi-programmatic tower, is the object of a very particular attachment to the qualities of Montpellier's «outdoor living», which the architects were inspired by from the very beginning of the project. The Arbre Blanc, despite its name, is not an ivory tower. Resolutely an actor of an urban metabolism, the building is above all a public tower, accessible to all Montpellier inhabitants with a roof-top bar and a restaurant. This atypical project offers nearly 2,500 m² of outdoor terraces to take advantage of the Mediterranean climate. At night, the light reveals its geometry. We are in charge of the complete lighting design and illumination of the 17-storey building in city core of Montpellier.

contracting authority

Opalia

architecture

Sou Fujimoto

OXO

Laisné Roussel

lighting design

les éclairieurs

surface area

17 floors

10 000 sq.m

budget

19 000 000 € e VAT

completion

2018